Career Association Launches World's First Ultimate Employment WIKI 'Career World Wiki'

Melbourne, FL - The members of the professional association, Career Directors International (CDI), have collaborated under the leadership of their Programs and Innovation Committee to spearhead the world's first Employment WIKI. Dubbed the 'ultimate employment wiki' at www.careerworldwiki.com, the site will present an unbiased introduction to information on topics including: Career Assessment, Career Coaching, Cover Letter Writing, Follow Up Letter Writing, Interviewing, Job Search, Resume Writing, Salary Negotiation, and International Job Search and Employment.

All members of CDI have been invited to participate in developing this comprehensive and extensive resource. CDI has provided resources, tools, and support groups for the effort but projects that this initiative could collectively take several years to complete and will be an ongoing effort to maintain fresh, current content. President, Laura DeCarlo, said "Yes, we realize we have a challenge ahead of us to create an unbiased encyclopedic approach to creating a career resource wiki, but because it is crucial to develop just such a definitive professional resource for job seekers and career professionals worldwide, we will push forward to make the initiative a reality."

To learn more about the wiki, visit www.careerworldwiki.com and www.careerdirectors.com/wiki.htm.

Career Directors International is a global association that spans all career disciplines, including résumé writers, career coaches and counselors, job developers, recruiters, outplacement specialists, HR practitioners and other specialists from private practice, civil service, academia and military.
